

They are specially developed electrical heater resistances used in high temperature oven applications in all branches of heavy industry.

